Research Process

Information Sources

Databases

Libguides

Three Categories of Information Sources

- Newspapers and magazines: articles are written by reporters or writers who may or may not be experts in the field of the article. Consequently, articles may contain incorrect information.
- Journals written by academics/and or professionals: Although the articles are written by “experts,” any particular “expert” may have some ideas that are really “out there!”
- Peer-reviewed (refereed or scholarly) journals: Articles are written by experts and are reviewed by several other experts in the field before the article is published in the journal in order to insure the article’s quality. (The article is more likely to be scientifically valid, reach reasonable conclusions, etc.) In most cases the reviewers do not know who the author of the article is, so that the article succeeds or fails on its own merit, not the reputation of the expert.

Accessing LU Library Website

- Access the LU Library website 365 days a year and anytime for your scholarly needs. The picture to the left is a visual depiction of what you will see when you land on the site. Check out the Quick Help section and enter your research information in the ONE Search box.
- Need to use our ILL (Inter-Library Loan Service) or want to request a book via Mobius contact us ASAP via email or by phone.

Databases

This is one of the most widely used scholarly-databases by academic libraries in the world!

- EBSCOHOST, is Page Library's main database for all of your scholarly needs. In order to access the database you must be logged in with your LU login and LU Password. If you are working from home, you must create a user account through the EBSCHOST website to access information from this database.
- Retrieve journal articles and peer-reviewed materials from Ebscohost.

Libguides

Libguides provide quick ways to access information about research assistance, subject guides, and use resources.

- LU Libguides are a great resource for students and faculty to utilize in the classroom as it pertains to learning how to research, cite, and access information for specific departments.

Special Resources

LU Information Literacy

LU Institutional Repository

LU Minor in Library Science

Special Resources

Check out these sources and inquire about them any time during the year!

- ◎ Information Literacy: is a methodology created to insure that all are equipped with the tools necessary to access, retrieve, and evaluate information. If you are interested in taking a individual workshop as a student, or a faculty member that wants to book a workshop for your class –Email | Academic Art Librarian kYmberly Keeton, keetonk@lincolnu.edu.
- ◎ Institutional Repository: is a repository service that houses all of Lincoln University's scholarship under one umbrella including monographs, peer-reviewed journals, teaching and learning resources, grant funded research & reports, working papers, artwork, conferences, etc. If you are interested in having your work placed our repository or to access scholarly information – Email | Academic Librarian, Haiying Qian: gianh@lincolnu.edu.
- ◎ Minor in Library Science: Lincoln University is only one of a few HBCU libraries that offers the MLS (15 hours) for future researchers and librarians. The minor features classes in the following areas Information Literacy, Intro to Library Science, Info Sources and Services, Collection Development, and Library Ethics. To learn more about our minor –Email Academic Art Librarian, kYmberly Keeton, keetonk@lincolnu.edu.

Archives & Special Collections

University and the state of Missouri's Black History

LU University Archives & Special Collections

The University Archives/Ethnic Studies Center is located on the third floor of Inman E. Page Library. It serves as the official repository for the historical records and documents of Lincoln University of Missouri. The Archives strives to preserve the University's history while providing access to the materials for users throughout the institution and in the community. In addition, the Archives promotes cultural awareness by supporting ethnic-related lectures and exhibits, as well as, by displaying archival artifacts and art.
