OFFICE OF
THE PRESIDENT

Dear Alumni, Former Students, and Friends:

One of the chief pleasures of the Homecoming season is the opportunity that it affords to us all, to extend our warmest welcome to those of you who are returning to the campus after an absence.

We are happy to see you return; to exchange experiences with you; to learn what you have been doing, and to tell you of our progress. Some of the things in which we take great pride can easily be seen - the new Auditorium-Fine Arts Center; the rapidly progressing construction of the new Health and Gymnasium building; and the unprecedented increase in our enrollment.

But there are other things in which we take equal pride. Things which, though they are not as tangible as a new building or a large student body, are of even greater importance as a factor in our school's growth and development. I think that the most important of these "intangibles" is the spirit of today's Lincoln student; his ability to work and play in harmony with his fellow-students; his sense of responsibility toward the school, and the community in which he lives; and his matter-of-fact acceptance of change not as an "issue" to be challenged, but rather as a natural way of life.

I think that you will be as proud of us as we are of you, and your achievements. Certainly we will do everything in our power to make this so, and we hope that you will return to this campus time after time and year after year, in order that we may always remain in touch with each other.

You have my sincere best wishes for a happy Homecoming.

Sincerely yours,

Earl E. Dawson

A long time ago during Biblical days, a "Dad", somewhere, killed a fatted calf and made ready to entertain a Prodigal Son who was coming home. Even pre-dating that time, the thought of homecoming has always brought about a nostalgic mood and an eagerness for old, familiar surroundings. Such a time is once again upon us.

Alumni, of course, are chief among those who in retrospect examine the years that have come between them and the "good old days" at Lincoln. The buildings are furbished in some cases, tarnished in others—but still here. Benches on which you used to sit with your good friend, trees where you carved her initials—still here. Although there is a new crop of instructors, here and there old familiar faces of teachers remain ready to welcome an alumnus of the good old days.

The President, too, is in the foreground of greeters. Homecoming is an opportunity whereby he might open the campus to Lincoln friends and former students. A cheery smile, and a hearty handshake make it more than evident that he too is glad to have you back and wishes you could return more often.

And our Queen in the tradition of all of the "Miss Lincolns" who have gone before, opens her arms and her heart on this day to welcome all members of the Lincoln family. No less winsome, nor lovely, she, than her queenly predecessors who in spirit stand beside her in making this a joyous day of Homecoming for you.

The students, too, come in for their share of greeting. The student body has changed somewhat since your day and yet in many ways it has remained much the same. That "good old Lincoln spirit" still abounds; much of the devilishness and carefree attitudes are also still with us. And like Lincoln students of all times, the eagerness to learn, curiosity about the world, and the warm generous love of the school is all-per-vading as it was in 1866 when the school was born.

The Tigers that this year bear the Lincoln standard are as fiercesome as ever—fiercesome in spirit and in the will to win that causes them to give little, if any, ground and that gives them the strength to create awesome holes within the ranks of our opponents. Through these holes skip a backfield that is second to none in its ability to sprint, dash, feint and fight its way to touchdown country.

Our opponents, who will be our antagonists only for a brief period this day, are also on hand with a spirit of brotherliness and fairplay to help us make the day complete. They bring with them a welcome from Central State College and also the keen whet of competition that keeps our Tigers alert and lively.
